Norfolk Nursing Sisters

Hospitals were set up to treat the wounded in field units close to the front line all the way back to Hospital Ships docked at Calais. The ships carried the wounded to England where they were placed in a network of military hospitals throughout the country. Norfolk Nursing Sisters were among the medical teams who worked tirelessly to save the lives of the young men.

The Legacy

Major Conn Smythe, Royal Canadian Artillery, was at the Battle of Vimy Ridge. In 1919 he returned to his home in Toronto and purchased a professional hockey team – the “Toronto Saint Pats”. In 1927, on the tenth anniversary of the Battle of Vimy Ridge, he changed the team’s name to the Toronto Maple Leafs. When asked why, Conn offered the following explanation:

“The Maple Leaf to us, was the badge of courage, the badge that meant home. It was the badge that reminded us all of our exploits and the different difficulties we got into and the different accomplishments we made. It was a badge that meant more to us than anything else: So we chose it for the team...hoping that it would mean something to those who wore it and when they skated out on the ice they would wear it with honour and pride and courage, the way it had been worn by the Canadian soldiers in the Great War.”
